Norman Huynh is now in his third season as Harold and Arlene Schnitzer Associate Conductor of the Oregon Symphony, where he conducts classical subscription, film, education, family and special concerts. This season, Mr. Huynh makes his debuts with the Rochester Philharmonic, Grant Park Orchestra and Omaha Symphony, and returns to the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra. He was Assistant Conductor for the Portland Symphony Orchestra in Maine from 2013-2016 and has also served as an Assistant Conductor for the Spoleto Music Festival, Opera Carolina and Baltimore Grand Opera. His additional podium appearances include engagements with the City of Birmingham Symphony (UK), Baltimore Symphony, Toledo Symphony, Charlotte Symphony, Naples Philharmonic, Memphis Symphony, 45th Parallel Chamber Orchestra, Leipziger Symphonieorchester, Orchestra Sinfònica del Vallès of Spain, and The Princess Galyani Vadhana Youth Orchestra of Thailand. Norman Huynh studied at the Peabody Institute in Baltimore, Aspen Music Festival and School, and Tanglewood, and won the Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy Scholarship from the Manhattan School of Music, which enabled him to study with Kurt Masur in Leipzig; his other teachers include Robert Spano, Gustav Meier, Markand Thakar and Marin Alsop. In 2012, Norman Huynh co-founded the Occasional Symphony, an organization that spreads orchestral music throughout the city of Baltimore. With an extensive background in music education, he develops youth concerts to provide a tailored and meaningful experience for concertgoers of all ages. Norman Huynh's performances have been nationally broadcast on American Public Media's Performance Today.
